

The Director's Pen

My heart is turned toward the Prophet Isaiah during this time of year. He so clearly articulates for us the grace shown us by God the Father. In chapter 40 verse one and following He tells us of the steps He has taken to bring comfort to His people. He did come with might, and like a shepherd He carries us when we need it most. We here at Sanctuary Outpost are grateful for that provision and for that comfort that He brings. Peace is the greatest of the Christmas blessings, wouldn't you agree?

Many of the division missionary chaplain are currently taking time with family and friends. They also continue the process of readying themselves for the New Year. After many years of working without a headquarters of our own we have decided to locate two of our divisions in the middle of the USA at Checotah, Oklahoma on I-40 and about three hours east of I-35. Our new headquarters will also be a community church plant that will enable us to develop volunteers and host chaplaincy training programs currently under development. The first national training event will be held in October of 2013. At that training we will host three distinct groups of chaplain. Those who are drawn to the community action ministry or the free medical clinic ministry will be trained by the Life Borders International division of CRM International under the leadership of Senior Chaplain Richard McCool. Those who wish to serve in the seasonally specific RV Chaplaincy will be trained by the CRM division led by Senior Chaplain Robert Ruesch. Those whose calling lies with international outreach will be trained by Dr. Dan Griffin of the Sanctuary Outpost division. It will be a welcome break before the intense fall/winter season begins for all of the CRM International chaplain, both full time and volunteer. It will also be a time of spiritual renewal as we take time to praise Him and worship together.

This time of year reminds us of how appreciative we are for each of our prayer and support partners both corporate and personal. Those of you who pray and give, volunteer and encourage are special to not only each of us but also to God. The opportunity to work with each of you in the past year has been a great blessing. We have seen God do wonderful things and it simply increases our faith for what He will do in the New Year. On behalf of CRM International and the Sanctuary Outpost division let me say thanks to one and all!
